The clouds, seemingly tinged with streaks of blood, hung over the silent valley, which might have been empty for all the signs of life it gave, while from the plain below us rozes dark and silent hills like the silhoucttes of tombstones through the kalf light. The fog thickened, covering low lying places. Nothing could have better suited for today's duel between two races.

Awful Din of Battle. From 8 o'clock in the morning the fight raged. Along the whole line the infernal din of the rifle fire continued as on the previous day, but up to noon the Japanese batteries gave no sign of life. It developed that they were waiting to locate our positions before opening fire. Even after they commenced it was not so heavy as the previous day's bombardment.

Far to the westward the Japanese are trying to work round our flank but there we are safe and have sufficient forces to meet them. Two simultaneous turning movements are proceeding, theirs and

Reports of heavy losses during the night attack are coming in. The Tomsk regiment suffered terribly. Of the brilliant Tamboff regiment few remained. The troops fought like heroes throughout the hours of darkness, and the morning found most of them dead on the ground they had bravely defended. Those remaining continue to fight. In the big village before us the remnants of several regiments, after repolling attacks throughout the night, ensconced themselves in the shelter of the walls of the houses, prepared for a fresh day's work.

Ordered to Fall Back.

The Japanese attack on Temple mountain, held by the Volonski regiment, began at 8:45 o'clock in the morning, but our batterles on each side kept them in view and repelled the attack. The attack was repeated at 10 o'clock, and finally at noon the general commanding ordered a retirement from the position, going to Shikhi. We had scarcely left the hill before it was covered with Japanese projectiles. At Shikhi we met General Zalinsky, who had come to report. Then an aide galloped up 'ith the news that the Japanese had driven us from the railtied on the west, 'lut had not followed up the temporary advantage, stopping to the Mornshevsk regimen paid them with interest for 'heir success of the morning. rnshersk regiment paid them with for their success of the morning. We took the week within touch of our turning flumn, so that strategically we have a cided advantage. In greatest contrast the veteran regiments that participated the battle of Liao Yang, the new retrees from European Russia, in fresh niforms and equipments, with faces uninned and unworn by war, are watchful, nergetic and determined.

Sous Zoutam, twelve miles south of Mukden, on the railway, Oct. 13.—(Delayed in transmission.)—A Russian correspondent of the Associated Press telegraphs as follows:
For over two days the battle has raged ceaselessly. It was close to midnight of Oct. 10 when the Japanese attempted to surprise and attack our frontal positions in the impenetrable darkness and hurled the full force of their battalions against our intrenchments. The darkness was split by the blaze of their rifles and the answering volleys of our own men. The attack never ceased for hours. We lay close, hugging the entrenchments with but a few minutes of respite, every man's gun to his shoulder firing at the flashes until near dawn, when the evil-boding rifle fire ceased and even the distant batteries were silent. We watched the daylight break in bands of red and yellow. The clouds, seemingly tinged with streaks of blood, hung over the silent valley, which might have been empty for all the signs of life it devel

The father became raving mad, and for a week did not allow his pistol to leave his hands, but later grew all right mentaly in every respect, and not until about two weeks ago has he shown any signs of insanity. He then swore that he was going to kill his wife, because he said she bore bad fruit, and also said he was going to kill his neighbor because he knew he was robbing him of his corn. hen he was arrested he made a terrible fight and caused the officers considerable trouble before they were able to overpower him. There is no doubt had he had a gun at the time of his arrest there would have been a tragedy.

At the hearing he was adjudged dangerously insane and was ordered committed to the asylum at Provo. Sheriff Clark took him up this morning.
